

2ND INTERNATIONAL YOUNG PLANNERS FORUM 2011
“END OF CITIES”
YOGJAKARTA, INDONESIA
13th – 15th July 2011

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

BACKGROUND

The International Young Planners Forum (IYPF), first established in 2010 at Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, is a forum that promotes knowledge sharing, intense discussions and network development among young planners throughout Asia – Pacific. The IYPF emphasizes the importance of building common ground of understanding, developing mutual relations among young planners throughout Asia – Pacific and stimulating regeneration of planners. The creation of IYPF was intended to nurture and to guide young planners, particularly in the Asia – Pacific region, to be able to comprehend planning and development issues in the region and to provide alternate solutions for those issues. Given that countries of the Asia – Pacific region have similarities in many ways; the IYPF believes that the region shall overcome future challenges by working together.

The International Young Planners Forum (IYPF) 2011 will be held in Yogyakarta, Indonesia on July 13-15, 2011. The theme for the 2nd IYPF is The End of Cities. The theme was selected because we are entering the urban millennium. The year of 2007 noted as a historical year for mankind. On that year, there was a major demographical shift of world population, where for first time in history of mankind, urban population is higher than the rural. By 2011, the world population estimated to reach 7 billions, most of them are in Asia. There will be 358 cities in all over the world by 2015 that dwells more than a million populations, 153 which are in Asia.

Giving the alarming population trends above, the city is becoming a battlefield for winning or losing our future's generation. Many of the world's large and mega-cities are having a downfall. Worsening congestions, intensifying pollutions, increasing size and numbers of poverty, slums and squatters with low sanitation and water supply, are some of example of how we lose our ground. To make it more dismal, there is a climate change, and Asia Pacific is very vulnerable to disaster. We are live in Pasific Ring of Fire. Yogyakarta in 2010 and Japan 2011 are small examples how catastrophe can occurred without notice and destroyed cities.

Despite all dismalty above, we still have to keep the main role of the cities to be continuously functioning, they are as engines of economic growth and as a place to stay. Both roles, in many occasions, often conflicts each other. Experiences in dealing with the problem in each Asia-Pacific cities are very much valueable to be shared among participants. Even more, in the 2nd IYPF 2011, young planners of the Asia – Pacific are expected to come up with new ideas and better solutions to cope the problem.
